1 Introduction. At least ve people have documented their observations of the symmetry groups present on the Alhambra Palace, Granada: Muller• [12], Jaworski [9], Montesinos [13], Grun• baum[7] and Du Sautoy [5]. In this short note, we consider the sym- metry groups used more generally in Islamic Geometric Art.

Islamic Star Patterns in Absolute Geometry • 117. In our implementation, we compute values for r and \hat{I} , numerically. Given n , r , and \hat{I} , we construct a regular n -gon of radius r . We then compute the location of B as the intersection of the two blue motif segments, as shown.

Islamic Star Patterns in Absolute Geometry

Disregarding the apparent visual di erences between geometric patterns, there are only seventeen possible symmetries of repeating geometric gures on a two-dimensional plane. Of these seventeen symmetry groups, ve are commonly found in Islamic art: $p6m$, $p4m$, cmm , pmm , and $p6$, with $p6m$ and $p4m$ appearing most often.

Islamic Patterns. Islamic artisans have been decorating texts, buildings, and other artifacts with geometric patterns for more than a thousand years. Artists working in a religious setting could hint at the inĩ•nitude of God by draw- ing potentially inĩ•nite repeating patterns (pages 1 and 2 of [2]).

Hyperbolic Islamic Patterns • A Beginning

The main shapes used in Islamic patterns are circles, squares, triangles, stars and polygons. Islamic patterns start with one of the key shapes. • Due to the maximal visual and constructional simplicity and maximal symmetry, a circle represents the primary geometric shape • geometric archetype• (Jablan, 200 2, p.1).
